

Nyeleti-Transforming the Way we do Business

The world is changing rapidly, and we are aware that we need to transform the industry, and the way we do business to create a sustainable future.

Nyeleti is pleased to announce that we have attained a Level 1 Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment (B-BBEE) accreditation – the highest BEE rating achievable.

As a company, our commitment to transformation is not only limited to our organisation but also to contribute to the transformation of our country and industry.

Our new BBBEE status is not only about compliance but as a proudly South African owned company, representative of our Nation.

Empowerment initiative

Sarah Marakalala, Jan Lebesse and Agnes Moholane, who work at Nyeleti as a cleaner, driver and tea lady respectively, are now in training to upskill their administrative and secretarial abilities, something to which many workers don't have access to.

We also implemented the following transformation initiatives that will assist with moulding the future leaders of our company and allowing them to realise their true potential.

Nyeleti young marketing initiative

The mid-level CC leaders are the key to succession planning and the sustainability of an organisation. We feel that it is important to instil leadership skills in our younger employees to equip them to seize available opportunities. With this vision, 22 young people between the ages of 25 and 33 were identified to participate in a Nyeleti leadership development initiative. The central theme of this initiative is to expose employees to marketing and business development.
